Aullwood Garden MetroPark

Garden displays that reflect a natural look and harmonize with the surrounding woodlands fill this 31-acre estate garden donated by Marie Aull, who was a local inspiration and advocate for conservation. She also assisted with the founding of Five Rivers MetroParks. The Aull house and surrounding gardens are examples of Arts and Crafts architecture and gardening popularized in 1900-1930 America. This living work of art has been a peaceful retreat for visitors since 1977, when Mrs. Aull donated her garden and home to Five Rivers MetroParks. The unique home and beautiful gardens are now listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Stroll the grounds of these woodland gardens. Visit often and discover the beauty of color, texture, and form in all seasons.

VISIT THE GARDENS — The garden acquired its present configuration in the two decades following John and Marie’s marriage in 1923. From the beginning, Wexley Creek served as a landscape focus and the forest shade determined the selection of plants. Tens of thousands of Virginia bluebells that now cover the hillside in late April are the progeny of 200 plants they purchased. The profusion of blue-eyed Marys multiplied from a colony rescued from a local farmer who would have plowed the plants. Through the years, the Aulls interplanted these native spring wildflowers and celandine poppies with daffodils and other favorites.

Mrs. Aull traveled throughout the world and was inspired by plantings abroad, which she mimicked in her gardens. Stroll the garden paths and enjoy seasonal displays, including hillside of wildflowers and daffodils in spring, magic lilies among ostrich ferns in summer, and witch hazels and luten roses in winter.

WALKING AND HIKING — Enjoy a path through a woodland and a prairie.

BIRDWATCHING — Aullwood Garden MetroPark is a popular birding location. Look for songbirds, hummingbirds and birds of prey.

PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES — Educational programs are offered throughout the year. These include spring walks highlighting the changing floral displays and other various events. Visit metroparks.org or call 937-275-PARK (7275) for more information.
